I do remember he use to fool us by saying that his eye sight was that good that he could read the time on the town hall clock in Perth ( was sitting on the porch at the farm in Guildford) He was able to pick up the reflection of the clock that was hanging on the wall behind him in the corner of his eye glasses, although at the time we didn't know this. He had a large purple birth mark on the right side of his face. The photograph taken on his wedding day has been touched-up and doesn't show. He lived out his last days with his son George and family at the pig farm in Guilford. The last time I saw him was 1962 when I visited him.His eyesight was poor but he managed to pick-up Ian (his great-grandson) and declare," he's a bloody Hatch alright"!."
